"Pappy" Watches Out For His Own, And Everybody

BY ELIZABETH LAWRENCE

You've seen it countless times, bouncing around corners, steaming down Ocean Avenue, scurrying over the hill to Monterey. It's gypsy caravan, covered wagon pioneering the unknown, the rescue plane putting down at the besieged airfield to waft victims of disaster to safety. It's a knight errant laying his cloak in the mud so a lady fair may trip daintily across. It's the line of camels coming into the oasis on the wind-swept desert. What is it? This mass of contradictions? This boon? This indispensable of indispensables?

Why it's the Carmel bus. And "Pappy" Wood is its impresario. No manager at the Met, no monarch of a realm enjoys an autocracy as supreme as his. Not that "Pappy" Wood thinks of himself that way, Not at all. Numerous encounters, a certain amount of persuasion, a veiled threat or two, and a prodding of his weakest point (helping others) were necessary before he would so much as consider so wild a project as a story about himself. "Can't you find something better than a bus driver to write about?" he asked. "What I'm doing is just part of my job." Besides, as Pappy pointed out, it's not his bus. It belongs to Bay Rapid Transit Co. There are 14 other Peninsula bus drivers doing just what he's doing, six of them on the Carmel-Monterey run. But ask anyone . . . ask them all. Once you've ridden the Carmel bus—once you've progressed from new passenger to habitue—whom do you remember? Pappy, of course.

Pappy would scoff, laugh his head off, if you told him he was doing anything different from the thousands of other bus drivers. It's just his job, he'll tell you—getting up in the cold and the dark, the rain and the fog, at 5:00 o'clock in the morning so his bus can make the sunrise run—at 6:40 out of Monterey, over the hill to Carmel, through the Village, around Carmel Point, past the bell towers of Carmel Mission, with the blue-black Santa Lucia Mountains beyond. Then another quick circle of Carmel, and back over the hill to the S. P. Depot at Monterey where the Del Monte waits, puffing for its morning trip to San Francisco.

On this run Pappy has his pincurl brigade—the government girls headed for Fort Ord, the Army Language School, the Navy School. (It's not always possible

Carmel Chamber Music Society Concert Sunday

The first concert of the subscription series by the Carmel Chamber Music Society will be presented in the simpatico atmosphere of the Carmel Craft Studios at 8:00 o'clock on Sunday evening. The public is assured that sufficient chairs will be available so that no one will have to stand. The large turnout at the last concert was a surprise for which the Society was unprepared.

Included on the program will be the rarely heard Brahms Trio for French horn, violin and piano. The French horn will be played by Joseph Axup, accomplished concert performer; the violin, by Miss Judith Grills, a newcomer to the Peninsula from New York and gifted artist. At the piano will be Gilbert Boyer, concert pianist and director of the society.

Featured also on the program will be Miss Korah Hahn, Korean soprano and teacher at the Army Language School. She will sing rarely performed compositions by Handel from Acis and Galatea for Soprano, obe, violin, cello and piano; and songs by Schubert with clarinet obligato.

Six songs by Carmel composer Hascal Vaughan Stewart will be presented on the same program.

The first Handel obe sonata will be played by Lloyd Clapper who has won the approval of Peninsula audiences for his beauty of tone in playing this difficult instrument.

George Beck, David Hagemeyer, Marie Sale and Edward Kuster will play the twenty-ninth Haydn String Quartet.

Mrs. Gene Erickson, flutist and wife of Major Egen Erickson at the Army Language School, will play the G-Major Bach flute sonata.

Editor's Column

At its regular meeting Wednesday evening, 7:45 o'clock in city hall, the council will vote on the ordinance repealing the law which requires the cable television company to place its transformers underground. If the vote goes as it has in the preliminary balloting, the ordinance will pass, 3-2, and the Alarm Corporation will be allowed to dig up its transformer boxes, 28 in number with a total of 44 in sight, and stand them on the public streets and paths throughout the residence district.

If the issue were the survival of cable television in Carmel, Mayor Horace Lyon and City Councilman Francis Whitaker, and your editor, might have hesitated to oppose disinterring the transformers, but no such contingency is involved. The Alarm Corporation has been in business in Carmel for three years with its transformers underground. At no time has it expressed any intention of giving up its monopoly to somebody else if the council should refuse to let it dig up the transformers. Nor has the company at any time offered to pass on the profits it would derive from reduced operating cost of above-ground transformers to its customers by reducing the rates.

Though it enjoys, in effect, a monopoly, the corporation is not a public utlity but a private business. Its books are its own affair; it may give as much or as little service as it chooses; and its rates are under no control from any state or city body.

Why the citizens of Carmel have sat quietly at home for the past six months without protesting before the council this giving away of Carmel's most valuable asset, the appearance of the residence district, for the financial enhancement of a private business, we cannot understand. There is no civic or community benefit to be derived from this gift of our most precious community posession. Nobody gains but a group of stockholders in a private company. All of us lose. —Wilma Cook.

Editor, Carmel Pine Cone-Cymbal:

As a one time resident of Carmel and perhaps a someday resident again, I was appalled to read that the war to preserve Carmel as an unusual beauty spot is barely going on any more, that Carmelites apparently no longer care that monstrosities of the commercial world are erected offendingly in their midst. I refer, of course, to the city council's least resistance action on the ordinance permitting television transformers above ground. With this approach, soon all Carmel would have to recommend it would be the ocean. Fortunately, God is in charge of that, not man!

I speak as a small voice, yet there are many of us. It has been, I am sorry to say, more than fifteen years since I have lived in Carmel, yet wherever I have gone, I have carried it in my heart and mind as something apart from anything else or anywhere else in my life. Several weeks ago, I began driving in the dark of the morning (3:30 a.m.) to be in Carmel by noon for a few precious hours there. Would I do it if Carmel were like all other places? The sights, the sounds, the smells which are peculiarly Carmel — do you not know what you have any more? I can remember when uprooting a tree from the middle of a road, for safety's sake, was a major issue! Perhaps I would not like to live in Carmel any more at that. Perhaps, by the time I get there, it will be like everywhere else and will have no special meaning at all, only regret and sadness in those of us who have loved 'the living dream of Carmel'

PALMA HOOP SQUADS AT CARMEL HIGH FRIDAY NIGHT

Drawing a bye in league play, Carmel High School's lightweight and varsity basketball squads will play host to the Palma High School teams from Salinas. Friday night's practice tilts will serve as a sharpener for the red and gray squads as they prepare for their league-opener against Hollister on December 9. The fast-growing parochial school from the Lettuce City is developing into a basketball power in this area and has staged the Northern California Parochial Tournament for the past two seasons.

A 7:00 o'clock preliminary game matches Coach Buzz Rainer's lightweight aggregation with Brother Lubert's highly-regarded limiteds. Sparked by four-year veteran Jim Konrad, the Little Padres are on the improve and should be right in the fight when league play starts. Ted Childers, Dale Dawson, Jack Faia, and Bert Macahalig round out the starting lightweight quintet.

Carmel's varsity will go with one unit composed of Bob Wise and Mervin Sutton, forwards, Dick Jennings and Mike Mosolf, guards, and George Wightman, center. Sharing the playing time will be another unit consisting of Tom Peyton and Dick Ogden, forwards, Bill McCormack and Charley Dawson, guards, and Bob Durbrow, center.

CCAL HOOP JAMBOREE AT CARMEL GYM

Varsity basketball teams from all the B division schools of the Coast Counties Athletic League will be on display this Saturday night at the Carmel High gym where the annual Hoop Jamboree is scheduled. While the varsities are shooting it out in an abbreviated tournament in the Carmel gym, the lightweight squads will be having a tournament of their own at the Pacific Grove High gym. The varsity Jamboree starts at 7:00 o'clock and the first tipoff in the lightweight hoopfest is slated for 6:30.

Designed to give fans a preview of the season's hoop prospects, to acquaint officials, fans, and coaches with new rule interpretations, and to raise money for the league exchequer, the Jamboree games are played in two five-minute halves with both a championship and consolation bracket. All the teams will play at least twice for the four finalists seeing action three times. Admission prices for adults: 80c, students: 40c.

Game number one at 7 o'clock matches Pacific Grove against Carmel's Gray team composed of Dick Ogden, Clyde Klaumann, Tom Peyton, Bob Durbrow, Bill McCormack, and Charley Dawson. The 7:25 tilt finds Hollister and Gilroy answering the referee's whistle. Gilroy has a veteran crew on hand for another season's play and is favored to repeat their win of the 1954 Jamboree. Led by Ron Leonti, smooth playmaking guard, the Mustangs also have Tom Chavez, Bob Mazzuca, and Ron Felice returning from last years championship squad. At 7:50, Carmel's Red team of Mervin Sutton, Bob Wise, George Wightman, Dick Jennings, Mike Mosolf, and David Gray will match baskets with Live Oak (Morgan Hill). Gonzales and King City clash at 8:15. Losers of the first round games go into the consolation bracket and the winners move to the championship bracket.

WATSONVILLE WINS TWO FROM PADRES

It was the men against the boys at the Carmel High basketball pavilion Tuesday afternoon where the big Watsonville cagers manhandled the Carmel Padres in both games of a practice double-header. Faster, more accurate, and especially effective on the rebounds the Wildcats had game control from the opening whistle and toyed with the rusty

Muser Recital

By Louis Fragos

A good-sized enthusiastic audience greeted Gert Muser, baritone, at his recital in Sunset Auditorium last Friday evening. The recital was sponsored by Mrs. A. M. Allan and Dr. Harvey Marshall.

In a diversified program comprising arias by Handel, Caldara, Wagner and Verdi; Lieder by Shubert and Schumann; a group of American songs, and three numbers by Richard Strauss; Mr. Muser showed himself to be a singer of considerable ability and experience. Mr. Muser was most at home in the opera excerpts where his dramatic ability was shown to advantage. In these, Mr. Muser's voice became more flexible, producing lower tones of exceptionally fine quality. Outstanding in the American group was the Seashell by Engel and the comical Big Brown Bear.

Mary Whitmer's accompaniment was excellent. She possesses that rare gift of fusing the accompaniment in quality and balance with the mood of the song established by the soloist.

General Show At Artists Guild Has Appeal For Everybody

The work of twenty-nine painters is on display during the month of December at the Artists Guild of America Gallery, a comprehensive show in which anyone can find at least one picture that especially appeals to them no matter what the variety of choice may be.

Keynote of the show is the Eleanor S. Nevins' Madonna and Child displayed in the Monte Verde Street window of the gallery. This picture sets the season's feeling for the show and adds to the feeling of Christmas in Carmel itself.

Specially displayed in the gallery is the painting by Paul Lauritz called Eel River, which carried off the first prize in oils in the recent Western Artists Show at the De Young Museum in San Francisco and which also was the choice of the public in their voting.

Nell Walker Warner is represented by gay and colorful floral studies and her Madonna and Flowers, also displayed on Monte Verde Street, is a charming soft treatment of the Christmas theme.

Autumn, Carmel Valley, is a fine piece of work by Paul Mays. Armin Hansen is represented by three paintings. A. Schaerer has an interesting group of five paintings, a floral, and four studies of European towns with special emphasis on roof design. Others showing at the Gallery are Hugo Ballin, N.A., Arthur Hill Gilbert, A.N.A., Leslie Emery, E. L. Bloomster, James G. Swinnerton, Marshall Merritt, Leslie Buck, Dorothy Furuya, Andrew Do Bos, Harold Landaker, Maria von Ridelstein, John Bingham, Mason Wright, Sam Harris, J. Greenwell, Florence Lockwood, Henrietta Shore, Vida Booth Ellis, Laurence Hosmer, Helen M. Parker, Fay B. Kennedy, Don Reich and A. Kasper.

Larry Colwell's Dance Photos In Show At De Young

Photographs of the Dance by Larry Colwell will be exhibited in a one man show at the De Young Memorial Museum in San Francisco starting today and continuing until December 27. Work displayed is drawn from Colwell's pictures both in California and New York, presenting sensitive camera commentaries on the dance and depicting dancers in varying behind-the-scene attitudes as well as on the stage during performances. Colwell makes his home on the peninsula with his wife, Karen, and three-year-old daughter, Sally Ann.

He has done program books for the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo and the company that is now New York Ballet Theater. Traveling with the companies for short intervals he would work backstage shooting from the wings. Colwell's photographs have been exhibited previously at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Smithsonian Institute, and he was represented in Amerika, a show traveling through Europe under the auspices of the State department.

DU CASSE ON TOUR FOR STATE DEPARTMENT

Ralph Du Casse was a prize winner in the Third Biennial of Sao Paulo, a show of Pacific Coast artists which opened in Rio de Janeiro this month. Du Casse went to Brazil for the opening of the show and has been asked repeatedly by artists and critics for his opinion on contemporary art in the United States. During the next three months he will travel to major Brazilian cities under Department of State auspices.

The exhibition of Pacific Coast artists' work will return to the United States in February and is then scheduled for a nationwide tour. Some of the pictures will later be selected for a projected tour of pricipal European cities.

Du Casse is the husband of Micaela Martinez formerly of Carmel.

Pines To Be Added To Kiwanis-Lions Xmas Tree Stock

Select silver tip firs are now on sale at the Kiwanis-Lions Clubs Christmas tree lot at Junipero and Ocean Avenue. Profits from the sale of the trees will be used to help build a baseball diamond at the High School.

According to Walt Pilot, who initiated the venture, the prices asked are in line with other tree lots in this area. Forest fires in Nevada, where the silver tips grow, have greatly decreased cutting and subsequent tighter control of forests, means that there will be a limited number of silver tips offered for Christmas this year.

Del Monte Properties has promised the clubmen 200 pine trees later in the month to sell to those persons who traditionally use a Monterey Pine for their Christmas festivities. A cheaper grade of fir will also be offered at the lot later.

The co-operative spirit of the tree selling venture was carried out when Youth Center members unloaded the shipment of silver tips on Saturday, the P.G. & E. donated the lighting for the lot, and Ed Neroda provided a construction shack for the headquarters. Kiwanis and Lions members are giving their time as salesmen for the project and have cleared the lot, built a fence and done other necessary labor.

No other trees will be offered for sale in Carmel this year as all the grocery stores, usually offering trees, have given their concessions to the Kiwanis-Lions venture.

so long.

Utility companies have no lack of funds to place equipment wherever necessary but no amount of money, no matter how great, can buy the kind of beauty Carmel has, the inner as well as the outer feeding of the spirit. There is a spirit of the earth, of the sea, of the trees, of God and all His wonders, if you will, in Carmel. Does a transformer have spirit?

Despite this seeming criticism, this is no less a 'Love Letter to Carmel' than Glenn Clairmonte's, but a place is like a person one loves: if it (he) changes within, the love is no longer the same, tolerance may be there but the inner heart and the pride is gone. So keep Carmel a place apart, object of love. She could so easily become lost among half a dozen other places anyone could name. Keep her for those who hold her in such high affection. Some of them must still be walking their dogs under the Carmel trees and swatting their paint brushes occasionally across this newspaper. Where are they when the council meets? Looking out to sea? Listening to Berle and Gleason? They had better look uptown and listen for the murmur of encroaching despoilment a little, else they may find that beauty is not everlasting!

Respectfully yours,
Ila A. Limerick.

Patterson-Weston Rezoning Hearing Held Over To Dec. 20

Members of the County Planning Commission meeting Tuesday afternoon, postponed consideration of a revised re-zoning application submitted by Cole Weston and Steve Patterson for their proposed restaurant site south of Garapata Creek on Highway One. Delay was granted at the request of Dr. R. A. Kocher, temporary chairman of the advisory committee for the coast area from Carmel River to Bixby Creek, who stated that the revised plan was not submitted to his committe until the day before Thanksgiving, which did not give enough time for members of the committee to study the new proposal and sound out public opinion before the Tuesday meeting of the County Planning group.

Weston and Patterson now ask re-zoning of 3.2 acres from residence to commercial use and that the rest of the 26 acre piece south of the creek, owned by Patterson, be changed from 60 by 100 feet building lots to one acre lots.

They originally requested that the whole 26 acre piece be rezoned for commercial use. The proposal was submitted to the area advisory board who recommended that it be denied by the county planning commission on the grounds that granting an exception to the established zoning structure in the Monterey County Master Plan might create a precedent, that there were already sufficient commercial zones in the coast area, and that the site of the proposed bar and restaurant impinged on the state beach acquisition plan.

Next hearing on the Weston-Patterson site will be held before the County Planning Commission on the afternoon of December 20 in the County Court House.

with Headquarters Battalion, First Field Artillery at Fort Ord, and during this time a resident of Carmel. He was born in Utah and attended Brigham Young University for a year and a half.

Charles S. Miller will join the force on February 1 as desk man. He is at present in the Army at Fort Ord where he is chief clerk in the intelligence office. Miller, from Seattle, is 26, married and the father of two children. He has been living with his family in Monterey but will move to Carmel before he takes over his new job.

Dan Thorp left the police desk job yesterday to be bookkeeper at Pine Inn and Chief Clyde Klaumann will operate short-handed until Miller is available.

Chief Klaumann has had difficulty finding replacements for the force as the starting pay of $296 a month was too low and men moved to better paying jobs or were not interested in beginning work at that salary. Klaumann has now upped the starting pay to $323 a month for Patrolmen and $306 for desk men. This was possible due to a provision in the salary schedule that in an emergency the chief of police can raise the salary. Klaumann will receive official confirmation of his action at the next council meeting and in the meantime is acting with the informal approval of council members.

FROM A LIBRARIAN'S NOTEBOOK

By Ruth Galvin Thornburg

Now that the thought of atomic weapons is a commonplace with all of us, we are beginning to consider questions concerning the warfare of the future and how atomic power will effect it, and the world which must survive such warfare if it comes. Ferdinand Otto Mische has had a long and brilliant military career and has written several books on military matters. His latest book is called Atomic Weapons and Armies. He discusses the combat warfare of the future, the organization of armies, the possibility of blitzkrieg, the role of the air force, infantry, artillery, and army engineers.

Two weeks ago we started circulating the latest Gunther Book, Inside Africa, and almost immediately it collected such a long waiting list that we sent a help-please call to the county for another copy to relieve the pressure. This week we have another book on Africa, written by Stuart Cloete, and entitled The African Giant. To gather material for this book, the author travelled for a year, going from the Cape to the deserts of the north, talking to the natives wherever he went. He describes a continent in ferment, with changes boiling up, especially in the field of education.

Me and Kit is the story of the life of its author, the celebrated director Guthrie McClintic. Of course the Kit in the title is Katherine Cornell. This is rich reading for lovers of the theatre, and that includes just about all of us.

Ship Ashore! is a record of maritime disasters, which reads as entertainingly as fiction. It was written by Jeanette Rattray. A good index lists names of vessels and their captains and should prove valuable to those wanting to trace a particular ship or person.

It took a long time for the revised edition of Rombauer's The Joy of Cooking to come, but it has arrived at last and goes into circulation next week.

Dr. Robert Taft, who is an authority on the use of pictures as historical documents has just published a big book entitled Artists and Illustrators of the Old West, 1850-1900. There are 90 reproductions in black and white of these old historical paintings and drawings, with data as to sources. This is an interesting book and one you will want to see, from either the historical side or the artistic, or both.

My Aunt Lucienne is by Rose Feld, and is a human interest story of the author's French relatives and her delightful visits with them.

The state animal of California, the grizzly bear, is said to be the greatest wild creature to live upon this continent within the history of man. A new book on the grizzly is by Harold McCracken, and is called, The Beast That Walks Like Man.

Red China is the subject of a book by James Cameron entitled Mandarin Red. The author is a correspondent for the London News Chronicle, and was granted a months sojourn behind the Bamboo Curtain.

The periodical Year has, from time to time, published large volumes of pictures centered about a central theme. The latest is called A Pictorial History of America. It tells the story of the United States and Canada from the Age of Discovery to the Atomic Era. There are 2500 pictures with text, and the arrangement is under general subjects.

There are four new novels, too. Something for everybody.

STUDENT ART EXHIBIT

An exhibition of work by 25 students of the Carmel School of Art will open on Tuesday and be on view, both in the school and the patio of the Carmel Craft Studios, until December 16. Instructors in the school are Clarence Bates, sculpture; Doris Ormsby, block printing; Louise Boyer, painting; and Jesse Cortaut, portrait work.

Arizona, New Melo At First Theater Is Laugh Hit, So Is The New Olio

BY MAX TADLOCK

At the risk of writing a eulogy instead of a review, let me tell you about the current light-hearted goings-on at the First Theatre, that unique state monument over in Monterey.

If there weren't so many things happening every night on this Peninsula, I'd be ashamed to tell you that this weekend I attended California's First Theatre for my first visit, and I've been a resident here for six years. But I'll not miss another production if I can help it. I've not had an evening of such pure unadulterated fun in years. When the audience leaves a theatre singing—yes, singing—something special has taken place.

The play is a western melodrama "Arizona" by Augustus Thomas, who made sure that it would be successful by including everything ever listed in all the formulas for eager playwrights. There is a mother ambitious for her daughters, a diamond-in-the-rough father, an innocent but wronged maiden, a sinister seducer, a December-May marriage, a suspicious and nearly cuckold husband, a true-blue hero whose chivalry would shame Sir Gawain's, a comic relief courtship, a native hero (gaucho in this case), the one and only United States Cavalry, and the family jewels.

If you go prepared to take this seriously, Marjorie Munk, as the colonel's lady nearly led astray by his executive officer, will make you cry. She's that good. And Holt Wood, the very archtype of villainy, will make you hate him. The audience could not help but applaud a bit when he got his just desserts.

But no one today could really take this melodrama seriously. For the modern ear and eye, it has some excruciatingly funny scenes made all the more so because of their careful presentation in the old style. Rhea Diveley has obviously done an outstanding job in the direction and an equally fine one in the casting. I wouldn't ask for a change in anything.

Clifford Andersen as the wealthy ranch owner, and Madeleine Hicks as his wife provide excellent comedy as do Fred Chapman, the army surgeon, and Eleanor Cence, the pretty school marm he courts in his own rough way. Carmen Mercante Fast is a delightful and slightly wayward ingenue, and Betti Callas Chapman is the very soul of innocence wronged who finally has her good name saved when Tony Cichoke, as the vaquero, offers to marry her and kills the man who wronged her. Tom Fast as her German father handles both the role of martinet and the German admirably.

Perhaps the two most difficult parts in the play are those requiring the shining forth of sterling character through the manly restraint necessary to all such hero roles. Jack Kidwell, as the colonel, and Ray Jones, as his protege lieutenant, handle these roles with aplomb.

Half the fun comes after the play is over, however. The troupers show their versatility at song, dance, and pantomine in the Olio, directed again by Rhea Diveley. Under the insouciant emceeing of ex-villain Holt Wood, they go through one of the funniest vaudeville routines it has been my pleasure to laugh, howl, and finally cry at. If you like the Strawhatters, you'll love this. Particular bouquets to Marjorie Munk, Betti and Fred Chapman, Carmen Fast, Holt Wood, and to Bob Vinton, whose excellent voice almost goes un-noticed because of the terrific pantomine he must compete with.

If I gave credit to all where it is due, this column would be only a listing, but I must mention at least the music department. If Susan Lee's old-time piano doesn't give you nostalgia, you're just too young to remember. Anyway, LaVerne Seeman's drums will make you sit up and take notice, despite your age.

Curtain time is 8:15 o'clock and the entire company will greet you any Saturday.

The group art exhibit opening December 7 has as its theme the holiday spirit.

Ferrantes Found Little Cars, Big Pizzas In Italy

At the meeting of the Monterey Peninsula Stamp Club in Carmel High School, Monday, Nov. 21, Peter J. Ferrante, local attorney and one of the founders of the club, spoke on the trip to Italy which he and Mrs. Ferrante enjoyed last summer.

He told of watching a baseball game played in the American fashion on the hills of Naples. "Due to the tremendous exchange of students," Ferrante said, "all nations are adopting world sports which makes for closer relationship and better understanding."

Spending time in Palermo, the Ferrantes were royally welcomed by many relatives. The pizzas there were large but the cars small on account of the narrow streets. Ferrante told of the misery and poverty in Southern Italy; of the voiced opinion regarding Mussolini and the Communists.

"Communism in Italy means nothing," an executive of a steamship company, told him. "Workers now realize the fraud. When a box of macaroni was offered to all Communists who resigned from the party— many workers joined the Communists and then resigned in order to collect the macaroni."

Easy Coins
A Quick Profit

Hear about Easy Roberts last Friday? I helped him count his money—both before and after—so believe me, the story's true.

Easy was on the way to the bank to deposit his "cookie jar" savings—exactly $24.95 in nickels, dimes and quarters. He had them in a paper bag and as we crossed Main Street the bottom fell out.

Money went flying. Passers-by pitched in to help recover the coins. Later on when Easy counted up, he had $25.05. The "search party" had turned up all of Easy's money plus ten cents someone else had lost!

From where I sit, I wouldn't want to try this "Easy" way to make money. Usually, it takes time for a bank roll to grow . . . just as it takes time for a friendship to grow. But by respecting a neighbor's rights—including his right to drink coffee, tea, beer or buttermilk, whichever and whenever he chooses—it's wonderful the solid friendship you can build. You can "bank" on that.

Nancie Brown's Wedding

On Thanksgiving afternoon, at 1:30 o'clock, Nancie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Mackay Brown was married to Willard Burgess Moore in a home ceremony performed by the Reverend Bernard Lovgren of St. John's Chapel.

The house was decorated with autumn leaves and flowers and the hearth and mantel of the fireplace, before which the marriage was performed, was banked with bronze and yellow chrysanthemums and autumn leaves.

Nancie wore a white brocade afternoon dress, the bodice embroidered with seed pearls. The Juliet cap, which held her finger tip veil in place, was also embroidered in seed pearls. She carried a nosegay arrangement of pale pink rosebuds outlined with carnations in a deeper shade of pink and completed by a circle of white carnations and nylon net from which fell white satin streamers.

Mrs. Patrick Dormody (Betty Hendricks) her attendant wore an ice blue brocade sheath dress and carried a corsage of pale pink rosebuds. Norman Brown, Nancie's brother, was best man for the groom.

Mrs. Brown chose a gold and black afternoon dress for her daughter's wedding to which she pinned a gold cymbidium orchid corsage.

Nancie and Bill cut their wedding cake and were toasted in champagne by family members and close friends who witnessed the ceremony. Afterwards there was a Thanksgiving dinner for members of the immediate family.

Following a brief honeymoon, Nancie and Bill returned to Carmel where they will live until May, when Bill, a Russian student at the Army Language School, will graduate. He then expects a European assignment and Nancie plans to join him overseas as soon as she is able.

Mrs. Chandler Howard, who spent two years in Carmel (1940-42) is now living at the Laguna Hotel in Laguna Beach and will be 100 years old on Tuesday. Going south for her grandparent's birthday is Mrs. Gustav Erbe of Carmel who will be accompanied by her husband. They will take with them a bottle of Madeira wine, the gift of Paul Swanson, who remembered that Madeira was Mrs. Howard's favorite wine.

Born in San Francisco Mrs. Howard, first came here to paint when she was a young woman and one of the original members of the San Francisco Art Association. There was no village of Carmel in those days but Mrs. Howard, along with her friend, Robert Louis Stevenson, then living in Monterey, explored the area finding suitable subjects for her pictures.

Following her marriage Mrs. Howard lived for 40 years in Japan, as her husband was Far East executive for Pacific Mail Steamship Company. Immediately before coming to Carmel she had resided in Shanghai for some years.

Serenade For Lola Bosholm

Members of the San Jose State Chapter of Sigma Nu fraternity serenaded Lola Lorraine Bosholm, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl J. Bosholm, on the occasion of the announcement of her engagement to one of their brothers, Norman Lee Young of Richmond. She also received a dozen red roses, another fraternity tradition.

Lola and her fiance plan to be married on January 29 in Carmel. She has been a yell leader at San Jose State and Norman, a senior, is treasurer of his fraternity. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Herbert L. Young of Richmond.

The Time Has Come .

By Kippy Stuart

This morning, early, I literally stumbled over Encyclopedia, volume C to E. Last evening a discussion on matters high-brow had brought this volume from the shelf, and all by itself the book must have slid to the floor. Not being interested in "matters high-brow", before coffee, I flipped the book over with my toe and stopped in my tracks. Staring up at me was the sub-title, Dog Rose. What in the world is a Dog Rose? (Just pick up any Encyclopedia and try to get away from the thing!) I was stuck.

I ran my eyes down the page and dogs had walked into my garden in a big way. Dog Rose is the nomiker of English hedges and thickets; Dog Rose is synonymous with wild brier. That was simple enough. But who ever heard of a rose being medicinal? The ripe fruit of this new plant (to me), is used to prepare confections. It grows what is called "hips", and these hips are used for medicinal pills.

Down the page came Dogtoothed Violet. With this dainty flower we are all familiar. But look what the Encyclopedia does to this innocent plant? The Dogtoothed Violet belongs to the . . . (now hold your breath . . .) family designated as mon-o-coty-ledo-nous!! This silly word means the lily family. How obscure can the scientists get? The Dogtoothed violet has its uses. In Tartary there is a superstition connected with the dog-toothed violet, something about lovey-dovey stuff, while in Russia the plant is a cure-all for something-or-other.

Down the page my eyes slid to fasten on Dogwood. Another familiar. We value the Dogwood for its heralding of Spring, but you haven't heard anything yet! Dogwood is a common name for plants of the genus Cornus sanguinea. The wood is hard and is used for butcher's skewers and for toothpicks. The fruit is black, the size of a currant, very bitter and yields a rare oil used in France for lamp oil and for soap making. Dogwood produces a bark valued as an antiperiodic in the old fashioned ague.

As though that were not enough indignity for this noble plant,—just listen. One of its uses is positively ignoble. In the deep south, rolly-polly "black Mammy" uses a dogwood branch in the form of a tooth brush to dip snuff! I knew if I read on I would find more iconoclastic information, and sure enough, here is a real shock. Why was it named Dogwood? Because a decoction of its leaves is used to wash lousy canines, and the synonym for our revered and much loved Dogwood is LOUSEBERRY TREE!

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCH

The completeness and integrity of God's creation including spiritual man will be brought out at Christian Science services this Sunday.

The Lesson-Sermon entitled "God the Only Cause and Creator" will include the following verse from the King James Version of the Bible (Matt. 7:18): "A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit."

Among the correlative passages to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy will be the following (539:19-22): "It is false to say that Truth and error commingle in creation. In parable and argument ,this falsity is exposed by our Master as self-evidently wrong."

The Golden Text is from Isaiah (45:18): "Thus saith the Lord that created the heavens; God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain, he formed it to be inhabited: I am the Lord; and there is none else."

Carmel hoopsters during most of the one-sided tilt which ended 55-34 in favor of the visitors. A pair of towering pivotmen, Don Bowles and Tony Jerecich, scuttled any hopes the Padres may have had to stay up with the Wildcats. These two talented cagers swept both boards on rebounds, tipped in shots missed by their teammates, and their fine defensive play shackled the usual fine shooting of George Wightman, Carmel's high-scoring pivotman. Dick Jennings, rotund Padre guard, was high scorer for Carmel, hitting for two field goals and adding a pair of free throws.

Led by Carmel High's perennial lightweight, Jimmy Konrad, who dropped in 22 points, the Padre limiteds made a fight of it all the way before bowing to Watsonville's superior size, 55 to 42. Both squads dispensed with defense in this one, trading baskets on full court dribbles and fouling with reckless abandon. Accuracy at the free throw line helped the Wildkittens establish game control as the black and gold sharpshooters made good on 24 out of 30 chances. While Jim Konrad's perpetual shooting arm was the outstanding part of the Padrecito's offense, it was the hustling all-around play of Bill Harder, Dale Dawson, Art Wilkerson, and Norman Bykerk which points to better things for the Little Padres in future games. Playing their first game of basketball, these lads showed exceptional poise against the swift-moving Wildkittens.

Friday night at 7 o'clock, the Padres get back in their own league when they host Palma High of Salinas.

to maintain a car on $3,000 a year.) Chilled, hurried, almost always late, they clamber aboard his bus, head scarves tied under their chins to hide hair still up in pincurls, their young faces scrubbed but, as yet, not powdered or rouged. On this run, too, Pappy has the nurse who has been up all night, caring for a patient. The cook on her way to a Monterey bakery to begin her day's work, a couple of men, carrying lunch boxes, tourists burdened with luggage. Everyone gets a cheery greeting from Pappy, a welcoming smile (it's 7:05 now). And soon they're seated, safe and warm in Pappy's bus, and on their way.

His eyes twinkling, Pappy pretends not to hear frivolous suggestions from the government girls about putting extra mirrors, dressing tables, and a coffee bar in his bus for these early birds. One young miss by now has become so proficient she can apply her lipstick while Pappy makes the swing from the Carmel Depot to the Carmel Theatre. Another is fastening a necklace, putting on pearl earrings. "Who's the guy waiting out there for you that you have to be so particular?" demands Pappy, making a grab for his rear view mirror into which the vain one is primping. "You're good looking enough now," he'll add. Then a reflective pause, "You have a bump of powder on your chin and three bobby pins are falling out near your left ear."

But woe betide the miss who is late, for whom the bus has to stop, not at the Carmel Library or London Mews—but smack in the middle of Lincoln Street, between 7th and Ocean. From Pappy she gets a good dressing down, kind, fatherly — and public — and next morning she's on time. Not that Pappy would leave her. Never. He watches the corners, the curves of roads. If any of his 'regulars' are not there, he peers . . . he waits . . . he opens his bus door with a semi-fierce frown as the latecomer, breathless from running, climbs aboard.

There is a story, which Pappy adamantly denies, of the young school teacher, one of Pappy's pincurl brigade, who was not on her accustomed corner one morning. Nor was she to be seen racing down the sidewalk as Pappy pulled to a stop in front of the library. Pappy, it is said, parked his bus, scampered out the door, ran to the lazy bones' house, and got her out of bed, and, presumably, looked the other way while she put herself together inside his vehicle.

Now at 8:40—that's a different matter. This is the white collar run—the Monterey office workers are Pappy's passengers. The bank employes, the secretaries, the bookkeepers—the adding machine and typewriter folk who make the wheels go 'round. This is a conversational run. The dialogue — and the repartee—between Pappy and his passengers whirls as merrily as the wheels of his bus. World affairs are discussed. Politics. The local scene. The county elections—and heaven help the candidate who gets a bad word said for him in the open forum of Pappy's bus.

Mid-day it's something else again. Pappy, with all the courtliness of an Atlanta plantation owner in the heyday of the bent waist and the kissed hand, transports the girls who are bit older up to the Village. To lunch, to baby sit, to shop and to visit. These are the fresh-skinned, grey-haired ladies in their smart suits, their white gloves, their flowered print dresses. There are also the quite elderly ladies who have a bit of trouble climbing a step that suddenly becomes very, very high on Pappy's bus. He helps them aboard, of course, lifts after them their straw marketing bags filled with books to be returned to the library. He can carry on a conversation with a siren of 70 or 80 who has forgotten her hearing aid. Sensibly he now talks of gardening, the weather, the new paint job on a building the bus passes. On this run Pappy is referred to always as, "Mr. Wood." No flip "Pappy" assails his ears, such as is thrown at him by the pincurl and white collar brigades.

None of this is private, of course. Visitors to the Peninsula are witnesses. Haughty strangers ride with Pappy because they've left the Cad in New York. For them Pappy is a one-man Chamber of Commerce. He assures the tourists, lugging bags from the S. P. and Greyhound depots in Monterey, who refuse to believe that all they need to do to reach Carmel is to board Pappy's bus. It sounds too simple. Pappy lifts the bags, slips them behind seats. Maintains stoutly, "Yes, this is the main street of Carmel," when tourists, mouth agape, point incredulously at the three blocks of storybook store fronts.

Voluntary, or involuntary, membership in any of Pappy's brigades engenders certain obligations. If, for any reason, one must take a leave of absence from the corner where Pappy customarily wafts one aboard—you tell him. No quitting of jobs and going home and staying there, leaving empty street corners for Pappy to scan at 7:00 in the morning. You tell him. The whys and wherefores. Same thing if you go on a journey —to outposts like San Francisco. If you intend to connect with the S. P. via Pappy's bus, you advise him—he'll watch for you that morning. Required also is a return reservation. "When are you coming back? What night?" demands Pappy. "I'll wait." And he does. There is Pappy and his bus alongside the S. P. tracks, to collect his own, bag and baggage, to whirl them over the hill to Carmel.

All of this is in the daytime, you understand. After 3:30 in the afternoon, when Pappy's shift is over, one of four other drivers takes over. They are Jimmy Grooms, Jack Beagle, Don Griffin and Harry Pallastrine. Like Pappy they all perform far beyond the line of duty, whipping the bus back and forth over the hill with a skill, diplomacy, courtesy and joviality that are a masterly example of good public relations.

But after 3:30 what of Pappy? Why, he has a private life of his own. He becomes Mr. Emmett T. Woods, who lives in Pacific Grove with his wife, Florence. Pappy has three grandchildren, Susan and Leonard Pflanz, aged 9 and 11, reside with their mother, Mrs. Marjorie Wood Pflanz in P. G. One of Pappy's sons, Holt Wood, performs a variety of theatrical functions—acting, writing, producing —for both the Barn and First theatres. A second son, Keith Wood, lives with his wife, and baby, Kevin, 9 months old, in Oklahoma City.

Pappy is a bit of an Eisenhower with the golf clubs. We had to pursue him for nearly two weeks to lense the picture you see here. He was always out at the Pacific Grove Golf Club in his leisure hours, polishing up his score. "I like to get out anywhere there might be a fish, too," admits Pappy, referring to another of his hobbies.

Pappy does not think so, but he's special. To former city dwellers, accustomed to buses where passengers are treated like victims riding a tumbril to the guillotine, he's out of this world entirely.

"You have to make your own job," he'll tell you. "I'm not doing anything. It really is up to everyone to keep a thing like this going." Well, Pappy is doing his part —with a heart so big he can spread it over all the miles his bus travels, giving parts of it to the old, the lonely, the frail, the timid. The little old lady for whom his cheery greeting may be the only words spoken that day. The old gentleman, alone now, living out swiftly diminishing days in Carmel. To the youngster, frightened and unsure, going to her first job. To the nervous maiden lady tourist braving the great unknown for the first time. Pappy is the friend of all of them. Someday . . . somewhere, perhaps, he'll get a reward —a bronze, or gold, or diamond citation—formed in the outline of his Carmel Bus, or maybe just in the shape of a generous heart.

Ordinance Proposes All Carmel Dogs Have Rabies Shots

At its meeting Wednesday night the Carmel City Council will consider an ordinance requiring dog owners to see that their pets have rabies shots at frequent enough intervals to protect the animals and the community from rabies. The county health department has asked the cities of Monterey county to pass such an ordinance because the county is experiencing one of the periodic rabies epidemics. The county already has a rabies shot ordinance but has no control over the dogs within incorporated areas.

In Carmel's ordinance will also be a change in dog licence fees, which are now different for males and females. The uniform rate will be $3.00, a compromise between the existing rates.

The council will make an agreement with the county for pound patrol since Carmel and the other Peninsula cities have been unable to come to terms with the S. P. C. A. which agreed to an executive board made up of city and S. P. C. A. representatives to control pound policies and finances, and then stipulated that the S. P. C. A. board of directors should have the final authority over all activities of the pound board.
